Durch die Jahrhunderte

- 1834 ● Zürichs erstes festes Theater, das Aktientheater, öffnet in einer ehemaligen Klosterkirche mit Mozarts Zauberflöte.
- 1849 bis 1858 ● Richard Wagner lebt im Exil in Zürich und dirigiert oft im Aktientheater.
- Neujahrsnacht 1889/90 ● Das Aktientheater brennt ab. Alle Zuschauer können sich retten.
- Januar 1890 ● Nur drei Wochen später beschliesst die Theatergesellschaft, ein neues Haus am See zu bauen.
- 1891 ● Nach etwa 16 Monaten Bauzeit öffnet das neue Stadttheater mit Wagners Lohengrin. Es hat von Anfang an elektrisches Licht.
- 1913 ● Wagners Parsifal wird hier aufgeführt, zum ersten Mal ausserhalb von Bayreuth.
- 1964 ● Das Stadttheater wird in Opernhaus umbenannt.
- 1980 ● Junge Leute protestieren vor dem Haus gegen die hohen Ausgaben für die Oper, während es für Jugendkultur kaum Platz gibt. Die Proteste werden als Opernhauskrawalle bekannt.
- 1982 bis 1984 ● Das Haus wird vollständig renoviert und bekommt einen modernen Anbau Richtung Seeufer.

GENAUER HINSCHAUEN

Ein Theater für Krakau

Zürich wollte schnell und ohne grosse Kosten ein neues Theater. Die Wiener Architekten Fellner und Helmer hatten einen fertigen Entwurf, der für Krakau gedacht, dort aber nie gebaut worden war. Zürich übernahm ihn, und das Haus stand nach etwa 16 Monaten.

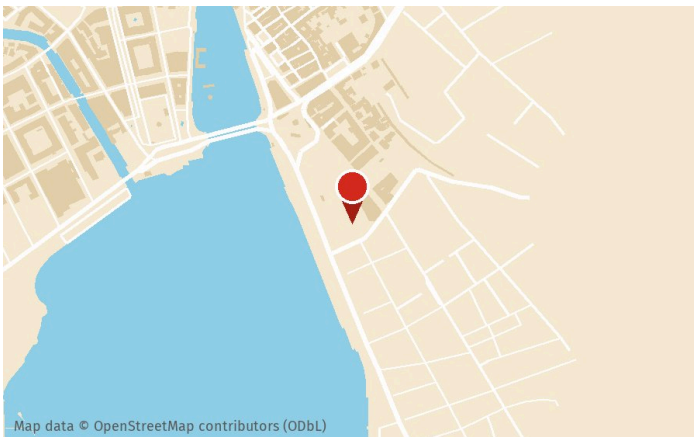

Auf Eichen gebaut

Der Boden am See ist weich und nass. Darum steht das Opernhaus auf 1868 Eichenpfählen, die tief in den Boden gerammt wurden. Seit über 130 Jahren tragen sie das Gebäude.

Gesichter an der Fassade

Schau zur Fassade hinauf. Büsten berühmter Komponisten wie Wagner, Mozart und Weber blicken auf den Platz, neben den Dichtern Goethe, Schiller und Shakespeare. Im April wird vor ihnen auf dem Platz der Böögg verbrannt, ein Schneemann voller Feuerwerk.

Der Böögg

Auf dem Platz vor dem Opernhaus steht ein kleiner Schneemann auf einem Holzstoss.

Jeden April, am Frühlingsfest Sechseläuten, verbrennt Zürich auf diesem Platz den Böögg, einen mit Feuerwerk gefüllten Schneemann. Je schneller sein Kopf explodiert, desto schöner soll der Sommer werden.

Das Opernhaus selbst entstand in rund 16 Monaten, nach einem Entwurf, den die Architekten zuerst für Krakau gezeichnet hatten.
